Q: Add new row at bottom of the row with specific condition I need to add the new row in the bottom of the table but only if the datetime value for that row is more than 5 years ago. I only found a way to add the new row at the end of the table. How to put a condition to check for the date to add the new row? Any help or guide to solve this is much appreciated. A: You can use jQuery to check when you add the table. The logic is: add the TR only if: date is in the last 5 years ago new row With this you can achieve it: `jQuery(document).ready(function($){ //check the date var date = new Date(); //the date is a long value, convert it to string with Y-m-d format var dateFromDb = date.getDate() + "-" + (date.getMonth()+1) + "-" + date.getFullYear(); if($("tr[data-date="+dateFromDb+"]").length){ //you already have the row with the selected date return; } var lastDate = $("table").find("tr[data-date]").last().data('date'); //get the current date minus 5 years var currentDate = new Date(lastDate); //convert to string var currentDateFromDb = currentDate.getDate() + "-" + (currentDate.getMonth()+1) + "-" + currentDate.getFullYear(); var dateDiff = currentDateFromDb - dateFromDb; if(dateDiff > 100){ //new row $("table").append("your new row"); } });` Archives Caution needed on Gadhafi threat Apr 11, 2011 By The Associated Press Photo: PA MONROVIA, Liberia — A Libyan leader's

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop CS4?

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a paper feeder, and more particularly to a paper feeder used in an electronic printer, copier or the like. 2. Description of the Related Art In a conventional paper feeder, a paper tray is pulled out to a position of a printing device and then the paper tray is pushed forward by a latch member to position the paper for printing. The latch member is pushed in by a printing operation to a position for retaining the paper tray to prevent the paper tray from being pulled out to an upper side when the paper tray is ejected. However, a push-in force applied to the latch member at the time of printing is extremely great. Therefore, sufficient rigidity cannot be given to the latch member, and a slip may occur between the latch member and an upper cover of the paper feeder. In an attempt to overcome the above drawbacks, a latch member has been proposed in which an upper portion is provided with a projecting part for engagement with an upper cover so that the upper portion can be pushed in sufficiently even when the latch member does not have a sufficient rigidity (Japanese Patent No. 2856851). According to the proposal of Japanese Patent No. 2856851, the projection is coupled with the upper cover and the upper portion of the latch member is pressed by the projection, so that friction is increased between the projection and the upper cover, and between the projection and the latch member. However, in Japanese Patent No. 2856851, the upper cover and the latch member should be brought into contact with each other and a pushing force applied to the latch member at the time of printing should be transmitted to the latch member through the upper cover to increase friction. Accordingly, the latch member may deform due to the friction. As a result, the upper cover and the latch member may be damaged. netstandard2.0 0.9
