I am a very friendly genuine person. I Love my Family & Friends. My mother raised me the best she knew how, I am very friendly and...Thousands of people marched in the city of Baku over the weekend, commemorating the 45th anniversary of the international terrorist group Islamic Movement of Azerbadiya (IMA), a violent Islamist terrorist organization which had committed many acts of terror in the late 1970s and early 1980s against the Azerbaijani nation and which was dissolved in the early 1990s with the collapse of the Soviet Union. The majority of these Islamists who participated in the march came from neighboring Iranian Azerbaijan and were directly linked to the Safavid-Eremitist regime which had been allied with the Soviet Union. The IMA was formed by the Safavid regime in July 1979 and led by the repentant baha'i jahil Hassan Ali now known as Abul-Qasim Mansur-Ali who had served 15 years in prison in Iran for his terrorist acts. The IMA was created following the assassination of Abul-Qasim's cousin Jalal-al-din-Ali, the head of the Azerbaijan foreign ministry in 1976 and his subsequent killing by the KGB in the Soviet capital of the city of Moscow. Ironically, after the dissolution of the Soviet Union, the Azerbaijani government extended its state of friendship towards the late Russian dictator Joseph Stalin and his regime, whom had helped the IMA assassinate Jalal-al-din-Ali.
